This is a black and white woodblock print map, likely from a historical Japanese publication. The map depicts a coastal area with a prominent city grid in the lower-left quadrant. A river or bay flows from the city towards the right. The surrounding terrain is rendered with stylized, wavy lines representing hills or mountains. The map is oriented with North at the top. There are some small, illegible characters on the map, possibly place names or labels. The overall style is characteristic of Edo-period cartography.
